

MyWriterMaster

Freelance Academic Writing

MyWritingMaster

Expert Qualification Test

Linguistics

We are glad to offer you this EQT to test your subject matter depth and word doc formatting skills before taking you in our freelance expert writing team.

You will be judged on these aspects

- 1. Plagiarism and referencing: Plagiarism (Copy pasting from external sources) is a strict offense and will result in cancellation of your solution straight away. Please note that all the assignments undergo a plagiarism test using Turnitin software and a content review from our expert reviewers before sending it to the client.
- 2. 8 word doc formatting.
- 3. Relevant content: The solution should be to the point and as per the questions asked.
- 4. Written English language: Your solution should have correct grammar and sentence formation etc.
- 5. Commitment to word limits and deadline.

If you have any doubts regarding the above 4 points please refer <http://mywritingmaster.in/writing-methodology/>

Start

Question 1. Identify and very briefly discuss the cohesive devices in the text by Carson (1962, as cited in Donnelly, 1994, pp. 111–112) below. Use the line numbers to point to specific uses.

1. Yet if our agriculture-based life depends on the soil, it is equally true that soil
2. depends on life, its very origins and the maintenance of its true nature being
3. intimately related to living plants and animals. For soil is in part a creation of
4. life, born of a marvelous interaction of life and nonlife long eons ago. The
5. parent materials were gathered together as volcanoes poured them out in
6. fiery streams, as waters running over the bare rocks of the continents wore
7. away even the hardest granite, and as chisels of frost and ice split and
8. shattered the rocks. Then living things began to work their creative magic and
9. little by little these inert materials became soil.

Question 2. One area where the lines between speech and writing, and formal and informal language are commonly blurred is in the register of advertising language. Here, writers and speakers aim to draw the intended audience's attention to key features of their discourse and influence the audience by using particular language patterns. By analysing the various grammatical structures used, we are able to assess and evaluate what a writer or speaker is trying to achieve.

Consider the Army recruiting advertisement found in Appendix D (reproduced below) and answer the following questions:

- a. What features typical of spoken language are found in this written text?
List them all and give examples using line numbers.
- b. What is the relative formality of the text? What language features convey the level of formality?
Again the response only needs to be brief and use a list format with examples and line numbers.
- c. What effect does the use of these language features have on the reader? Only one or two sentences needed.

You've done your best, now do better.

1 Finally, your Year 12 results are here. So
2 how did you go?
3
4 Whatever your results, it's now time to
5 make plans for the future.
6
7 But how do you know whether or not your
8 further studies will give you the edge you need to
9 succeed in a fiercely competitive job market?
10
11 Well, when you study through the 12
13
14

15 Australian Army, getting
16 a well-paid, secure job is
17 a certainty.
18
19 Whether it's a university degree,
20 technical and trade
21 training, or leadership
22 and management skills,
23 the Army will guarantee
24 you a job when you
25 graduate.
26
27 Plus the Army will
28 pay you to

29 study and cover costs like
30 books, HECS fees and
31 equipment.

32 It's not just your
33 academic skills that can
34 give you an edge either.

35 In the Army, you
36 gain a new sense of
37 confidence, leadership
38 and discipline. Which are
39 qualities that are always
40 in demand.

41 Indeed, the civilian
42 work force is always
43 looking for people with
44 the endeavour, attitude
45 and ability only the Army
46 provides.

47 So if you're looking
48 for a better tertiary
49 qualification, just call 13
50 19 01 today.

End